

TRANSITION FOR ALL

Week 8

Transition support

Thank you so much to the children and parents who have shared their work with me to pass onto secondary schools, I have been inundated with amazing work from children in a range of year groups! The first 2 to come in were from Evie and Jake who currently both attend Springfield. I know the secondary schools love to see your work so keep it coming!

This weeks task:

Why not challenge your new teachers? I see lots of people having family quizzes. Lets make a huge Sandwell schools quiz!

Pick your favorite subject and create a quiz for one of your new teachers. Can you think of some questions that they will find difficult to answer? Take the opportunity to really test the knowledge of the teachers! I am sure if you send me all of your questions the staff in your new schools will be happy to take your quiz and send you the answers they have come up with for you to mark!

Use your knowledge, your old work books, talk to family to help, whatever you can do to challenge the teachers! This doesn't need to be a transition task, whatever your year group, I can pass on any quiz questions you come up with! Just email me at liz\_stevenson@sandwell.gov.uk and tell me your current school, year group and future school.

Top Tip

Take some time this week to talk to each other. More than that, make sure you find time to listen to each other.

Each person in your household will be feeling very differently about everything that has happened over the last few weeks. Take some time to let everyone try to put into words how they are feeling and really listen to each other. You might find that things are more positive than you think. I am really enjoying the opportunity to spend some quality time with my children. With nothing else to do, they are actually talking to me occasionally! As a parent of teenagers, this is new territory for me! How are your conversations going with your children?
